Railroads Seek Boost In Freight Rate On Potatoes

The Bangor and Aroostook Railroad has joined other eastern rail carriers in proposed potato freight rate increases averaging 4 cents per hundredweight on 60,000 pound cars from origins in Maine and New Brunswick to Official Territory. The Bangor and Aroostook cited rising costs as a prime factor in the proposed rate hike.

Official Territory is a rail term that includes destinations east of the Mississippi River and North from the Virginia and western Maryland state lines.

From a Caribou origin to Boston, the proposed rate would increase the cost of a 45,000 pound minimum car by $9.45. The increase for a 60,000 pound minimum car would be $25.80, $102.00 on a 100,000 pound minimum car and $128.00 on a 120,000 pound minimum car. Increases per car, respectively, from Caribou to Harlem River, New York are $9.00, $25.50, $101.00 and $129.00.

Keag Shuts Out Houlton, 6-0 In Blue Ox Tourney Contest

A five-run rally in the bottom half of the eighth inning provided the clincher Sunday as Mattawamkeag defeated the Houlton AA, 6-0, in the first round of play in the Blue Ox semi-pro baseball tournament at Mattawamkeag.

The host team had scored an unearned run in the first inning, and then the two clubs battled evenly until a combination of three hits, four walks and a hit batsman gave Keag its five runs in the eighth.

Denny O'Mally and Gil Arnold hooked up in the tight pitchers duel. Arnold limited Houlton to three hits over the nine-inning route, and O'Mally held Keag to three hits until the eighth inning outburst.

Mattawamkeag has proved a thorn in the side of Houlton all season, and is the only club to give the AA much trouble. They blasted the AA, 19-4, in a contest at Houlton on July 25.

The loss was only the sixth in 23 starts for Houlton, and it was only the second time this season they have been shut out. North Carlton did the trick, 3-0, earlier for the only defeat Houlton has in its Maine-New Brunswick Central Valley League play.

Conservation Notes

USDA Soil Conservation Service

The Supervisors of the Southern Aroostook Soil and Water Conservation District are sponsoring two conservation tours this month, according to Henry McBride, Littleton, Chairman. One tour will be Tuesday, August 12, in the Island Falls, Fatten and Sherman area. The tour will leave Island Falls High School at 1:30 p.m. The second conservation tour will be Thursday, August 14. It will start from in front of the Houlton town office at 1:30 p.m.

The tours are set up for anyone interested in conservation, in order to show them some of the work that is being done and some of the problems we still have.

I feel these tours would be of real value to town officials as well as any other interested person.

Conservation effects the urban people as much as the farmer, so let's get behind our local Soil and Water Conservation District and see what is going on in conservation in Southern Aroostook.

FISH POND MANAGEMENT
The Central and Southern Aroostook Soil and Water Conservation Districts are co-sponsoring a fish pond management school at the Herschel Smith pond in Westfield on Route 1. It will be Tuesday, August 19, at 6:30 p.m. There will be a discussion on weed control, safety, state laws regarding stocking, among other things.

Everyone is invited to attend.

Increased farm production resulting from tremendous advances in science and technology tends to obscure the fact that, to meet food and fiber needs of a few years hence, this country will need the production equivalents of about 200 million acres, based on current yields. Since we do not have the additional acres of cropland, this production must come largely from increased yields on existing land, according to the USDA Employee Newsletter.

CONSERVATION CAMP
The Aroostook Conservation and Education Camp and Workshop has made it possible for a number of boys and girls to attend a conservation camp this summer. Over 25 boys from Southern Aroostook are at camp this week. This is the last week this year. The camp operated for four weeks with about 60 campers each week. This is a project sponsored by the St. John RC&D project. Everyone has worked together to make it a success.

I believe special thanks goes to Lewis Berce of the Extension Service in Houlton for the extra hours and the hard work he has put into helping the boys and girls in Aroostook County to be able to attend this camp.

Banquet-Sales Clinic Launch Bazaar Of Values

A most attentive audience of 215 merchants, their sales clerks and service personnel attended a banquet and sales clinic in the ballroom of the Northland Hotel as a prelude to the Bazaar of Values promotion in which 42 merchants and business firms are participating.

The banquet and sales clinic were sponsored by the Pioneer Times and featured an address by Guy Painter Sr., of Atlanta, Ga., and president of Canadian Media Services.

Mr. Painter, who is recognized internationally as an authority on human relations and sales promotion, covered all aspects of selling. He dwelled on the fact that the customer is the most important ingredient in any sale, and the dealing successfully with the customer requires far more than a simple smile.

The speaker has more than 35 years in sales promotion, and has conducted similar clinics all across the United States and Canada before audiences ranging up to 3,500 persons.

Seated at the head table for the banquet and clinic with Mr. Painter were Douglas McIntyre, an associate, the Rev. Robert Blake, pastor of the First Church, Unitarian Congregational, and Mrs. Blake, Willard A. Putnam, president of the Houlton Chamber of Commerce, Marshall Hammond, Publisher-editor of the Pioneer Times, and Mrs. Hammond, a sales representative of the Pioneer Times, and Wendell Guy, advertising manager for the Pioneer Times.

Special features of the banquet and sales clinic included corsages for each of the ladies present, and cigars for the men. To prove one of Mr. Painter's main points that "You have to get off your chair to make sales", the audience was asked at the conclusion of the evening's program to get up and look underneath their chairs.

Underneath the chairs were $100 in bills ranging from $1 to $20 in denomination.

Canadian Foods Featured At First National Stores

Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont have particularly close ties with Canada. Not only do their borders touch those of our neighbor country, but many first, second and third generation American-Canadians live in these states. Because of proximity and family ties, it is natural that there is a mutual crossing of the international line. During the summer months, northern New England communities are visited by Canadian vacationers who arrive by the thousands to take advantage of our resorts and, incidentally, to leave dollars which help support the economy of the areas in which they stay.

Business recognizes the value of this influx of Canadians and with the first warm weather, the "Bienvenue" and "Welcome Canadians" signs appear along the highways and in the windows of stores and motels.

First National Stores is among those who pay particular attention to visitors from the Canadian provinces. The food company is now conducting a two-week "Finest Canadian Food Festival." During this period, First National Stores Throughout Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont will feature foods from Canada. In-store display material will include point-of-sale signs in both French and English.

Entry blanks for two major customer awards will be available in each store. No purchases are necessary. First prize is a seven-day vacation for two at St. Andrews - By-the-Sea, St. Andrews, N. B. Second prize is a three-day trip to Toronto.

Summer Jobs

Summer is the season when formal education across the U. S. comes to a near standstill. It is happiness time for the small fry, and for a few of the larger ones who have the means to make it so. Traditionally it is the season for travel, of cottages and beaches, and of shorts and camps and sunburn.

But for one group in particular the summer season brings forth mixed emotions and perplexing problems. This is the group of youth in the 16-21 age bracket, comprised of high school and college students who are looking for summer jobs.

Summer jobs for these youth is vital. For many it represents the only means of returning to school in the fall. For others it is necessity in helping ends meet at home. Without jobs some of the youth may turn to the streets from sheer boredom and become problem youth. All who want to work should have the opportunity to do so.

The President's Summer Youth Opportunity Campaign is designed to this end. It is an admirable campaign to which every responsible citizen in the Nation should give enthusiastic response. Every businessman and every individual can join merely by determining to be of help in his or her community.

It is the American way of life to offer youth a helping hand. We urge every responsible citizen in this community to maintain this tradition. Let no job that a youth can perform be left undone in our community this summer.

Nature's Ways

I seldom see a pond covered with white water lilies without being reminded of what may have been the most chivalrous act of our era.

A friend of mine on his wedding day donned hip boots and waded into a pond at the bride's behest to gather her a bride's bouquet of fragrant white water lilies.

It may be all right for St. George to slay a dragon or Beowulf to kill a water monster, but a man who goes wading in a lily pond never knows what he is getting into. The presence of the lily rather indicates that the pond is filling with muck, for water lilies favor old and dying ponds. This particular venture turned out all right. But, if more brides had a yen for a water lily bouquet gathered by her prince charming, the fad could go far toward solving the population explosion He who wades into a mucky pond may float back a few days later.

One of the poetic acts of the father of scientific names lay in changing his own name from plain Carl von Linne to Carolus Linnaeus. Linne must have been mining a similar streak of luck when some disciple delivered to him a white water lily from the New World for the Swedish scientist dubbed it Nymphaea odorata, or the fragrant nymph. Anyone who has gazed at these ghostly galleons riding at anchor on a pond at sunset and smelled their sweet odor recognizes the appropriateness of the name.

The average life of a water lily blossom is three days. The morning line that anchors the blossom then coils and drags the closed and fertilized flower beneath the surface. After three weeks, the blossom has completed transformation into a submarine seed pod. At this time, the globular seed pod bursts and releases a score of seeds, one by one. Each seed is encased in a jelly that makes it buoyant and carries it to the surface.

The jellied seed floats on the surface, propelled by wind or any current. Within a day, the jelly coating bursts and the seed drops toward the pond bottom. Thus the water lily disperses its seed over most of the pond, giving each seed a better chance of finding a favorable location for growth well away from the parent plant.

The jelly-boat system explains how water lilies can become thriving plant communities within a pond. It does not, however, answer the question of how they colonize other ponds without man's help. Some ponds actually are wide deep sections of a brook, with water flowing into and out of the deep natural basin in which they lie. In such instances, water lily seeds may float away on the pond flowage and possibly find a new beachhead for the family.

One does, however, find water lilies thriving in isolated ponds where seeds never could have floated to them. The most probable explanation of how seed could have reached such a pond lies in the fact that many ducks eat water lily seeds, often picking them up from the pond bottom. The ring-necked duck, blue-winged teal and wood duck are the better-known New England ducks among the species known to eat water lily seed. Some seeds go through a bird's digestive system unscathed and ready to germinate.

Songs And Ballads

The popular ballads put forth in "Songs And Ballads of the Maine Lumberjacks" represent the literature of Maine lumber camps and river towns. When the songs were gathered during the first part of this century, the lumber communities were still remarkably isolated and from the modern world. The people gave voice to their joys, aspirations, sorrows, and love in songs that were built around such events as war, drinking, boasting, and work.

Many of the ballads were based on local history. For example, "The Jam at Gerry's Rock" tells the tragedy of Jack Monroe and his crew of "brave shanty boys" who tried to break a jam on the Penobscot River. All the men died in the raging river and only young Monroe's mangled body was recovered. Shortly after, his lover, Clara Vernon, died of a broken heart and joined him in a grave.

The song relating this incident was composed around camp fires through the joint effort of 150 different men. It later turned up as a folk legend in the West, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Michigan and even Scotland.

The ballads are arranged in four sections—songs of the lumberjacks, old ballads, historical ballads and songs, and Maine broadsides. Supplied in headnotes is information about the collectors, informants, known authors, and song origins and histories. Footnotes explain the obscure words.

NOT ASKING FOR THE MOON

Washington Highlights

By Ray Vernon

When the White House conference of food, nutrition and health convenes here in October one of the leading points of discussion may well focus on some myths surrounding the amount of food available to feed the world's exploding population.

And it is just as likely that the No. 1 myth-explorer at this meeting could be Dr. Jean Mayer, the man chosen by President Nixon to organize the conference. Dr. Mayer is an acknowledged expert in the science of nutrition and is the President's adviser in that field.

Major Factor

Food, he says, is only an element in the population problem. True, it is a major factor in some parts of the world, but there are large areas where the national food supply is a minor factor and others where it is not a factor at all.

"Considering the world as a whole, there is no evidence that the food situation is worsening and there is at least a likelihood that food may at some time (20 or 30 years from now) be removed altogether as a limiting factor to population," he writes in Columbia University Forum.

While the United States, admittedly, is not typical among food producers of the world a few examples of what we have achieved with modern agricultural techniques can pave the way for others to do likewise.

Consider that our government rents 20 million acres from farmers so that they will not grow food on them. An Iowa State University study a few years back suggested that 62½ million acres ought to be taken out of farming so that surpluses will not continue to be created in relation to the present market. Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Argentina and France are involved in similar efforts to restrict production.

"I believe that there are no grounds for saying in 1969 that the nutritional state of the world is getting worse," Dr. Mayer asserts. "It is not."

"Bad as it is, the present (food) situation is no worse than the past and probably somewhat better. But what of the future? In absolute numbers, the increase in population is likely to accelerate for some time. Can the food supply be kept up? My contention is that, for better or for worse, it can and will."

The Foreign Agriculture Organization estimates that 3.4 billion acres world-wide are at present under cultivation. This represents less than 11 per cent of the total land area of the world. Some experts estimate the area that can eventually be made arable at from 13 billion to 17 billion acres. Colin Clark, director of the Agricultural Economics Research Institute at Oxford University, even sets the figure at 19 billion acres but he counts double-cropped tropical lands twice.

Clark considers that if the lands were farmed as well as the Dutch farmers work their acres today, it would support 28 billion people on a Dutch diet. And if Japanese standards of farming and nutrition were used, this would support 95 billion people.

Fertilizer Termed Key

One of the keys to successful farming of this type is use of fertilizers and herbicides. By pre-World War I standards of cultivation, according to Dr. Mayer, it took 1½ acres to support an American. If such standards prevailed today, we would need to add at least 40 million acres to our farm area every 10 years, or the equivalent of an additional Iowa every decade.

India, Africa and most of Latin America use only an infinitesimal amount of fertilizer. It is estimated that an expenditure of $10 an acre per year for fertilizer would alone add 50 to 100 per cent to the low yields in underdeveloped countries. Applying this investment to an area of 1.5 billion acres would be equivalent to adding at least 750 million acres to the crop areas of these countries, the equivalent of a continent bigger than North America.

This week launches the Bazaar of Values promotion in the Pioneer Times, with 42 local business places and merchants participating. The whole idea is to emphasize a fact that we have known all along — that Houlton is a fine place to shop and transact your business.

A special Bazaar of Values section in this week's edition carries an advertisement for each of the participating merchants, plus information on how the shoppers can win the $200 in special prize money that we are adding to the promotion. Prizes will be given each of the eight weeks of Bazaar of Values.

Certainly a feature of the Bazaar of Values promotion was the talk given by Guy Painter Sr., before more than 200 merchants, businessmen, their clerks and service personnel in the newly decorated ballroom of the Northland Hotel.

Mr. Painter, in internationally renowned authority on human relations, and one of the best speakers to come to Houlton in some time, conducted a sales clinic that just has to be termed outstanding.

His down to earth approach to the art of selling, and of serving the buying public was something that everyone could understand, and associate with. And every point that he made during the clinic was backed up by more than 35 years of experience in sales promotion and human relations.

He dwelled at length on just how important the consumer is, and on the attention that the consumer is entitled to in a place of business. And then he would make an observation that was both simple, true and directly to the point. "You don't get a second chance to make a good first impression," he told his audience.

Attendance at the sales clinic was 215 persons, and the ballroom of the Northland Hotel was a perfect setting. The Adams family, who now own the Northland and who are making an honest effort to bring the Hotel back into its rightful place of prominence in the community, did an absolutely superb job in serving that many persons.

This was clearly dramatized when all 215 were served their meal in just 15 minutes.

In only about 45 minutes, the full course dinner had been served, the tables cleared and the speaker began his talk right on schedule.

Mr. Painter then spoke for just over an hour, and it was one of the shortest hours of the year. If you missed him, you missed a most inspiring and informative speaker.

Washington, D. C. — America will celebrate her 200th birthday in less than seven years and among the most exciting plans which may materialize to mark that anniversary is to create from scratch an entirely new Experimental City to serve as a laboratory for urban living.

This is no idle pipedream. Since first proposed to the White House in 1966, three Federal departments have invested a total of $240,000 in the plan, and private industry another $120,000. Billions more will be necessary if the project is completed, and much of the money will have to come from business firms.

Originator of the idea was one of the nation's top scientists, Dr. Atherton Spilhaus, former Dean of the University of Minnesota Institute of Technology, now President of the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia. He headed an American Academy of Sciences committee on pollution which found that the best solutions to urban pollution problems cannot be applied effectively in existing cities.

The publisher of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune, Otto A. Silha, a research-minded executive who has contributed greatly to newspaper production technology, grabbed that ball and has run with it. His dream is MXC, Minnesota Experimental City, located 100-150 miles from Minneapolis-St. Paul, with a population of 250,000.

Silha now has a steering committee of 22, most of them not Minnesotans and many of them nationally prominent in such fields as economics, public health, sociology, engineering, city planning, urban problems, etc.

facilities but ready access to nursing service, plus individual homes for those in later stages of convalescence.

This enclosure concept need not be limited to those with medical problems. For example, it might be adapted to those interested in outdoor recreation. Through climate control, you could go out your front door and play golf in an Arizona climate, and out your back door to ice skate or ski in typical Minnesota weather.

Transportation in MXC would be radically different. Automobiles might be banned from the central city. Free public mass transportation may be built in, like an elevator in a building. It might take the form of electrically powered four passenger vehicles running in a continuous series to key points.

Many such ideas, not technically feasible, are almost impossible to install in existing cities because of the difficulty of gaining right-of-way and the tremendous expense of getting rid of structures that already exist. A new city would have no such problems.

Differ From "New Towns"

MXC would be a great deal different from the more than 250 "New Towns" created in various suburban areas in recent years. Examples of these developments are Reston, Va., and Columbia, Md., both near Washington, D. C. These are real estate projects, designed to make money for the promoters, and they are concentrated in the outer suburbs of over-crowded areas.

MXC would not be a commuting community but would be outside an existing metropolitan area. And the motivation would not be private profit but the public good. Business would pay the bill, in return for the opportunity to try out new techniques without the impediments of regulations, restrictions, codes, and practices. Industry achieving economies not now possible.

Government has helped in the planning of the Experimental City. But if it is built, it will be because business is willing to invest heavily in a unique opportunity to begin from scratch, without blight, congestion, pollution or unduly restrictive building codes. And that fellow who plays Golf outside his front door and Skis outside his back door might just be the ideal employee.

Controlled Climate

Among the existing new concepts proposed for MXC is a medical complex which would be completely enclosed to reap the benefits from a controlled climate. As Mr. Silha once expressed it, "this would be the Houston Astro-dome multiplied by a factor of more than 100". It is technologically possible to enclose an area with a diameter of two miles, or more than 2,000 acres.

The medical complex would contain a general hospital, a specialized heart hospital, and a "secondary care hospital" for convalescent patients, nursing homes, a motel-like structure with private housekeeping
